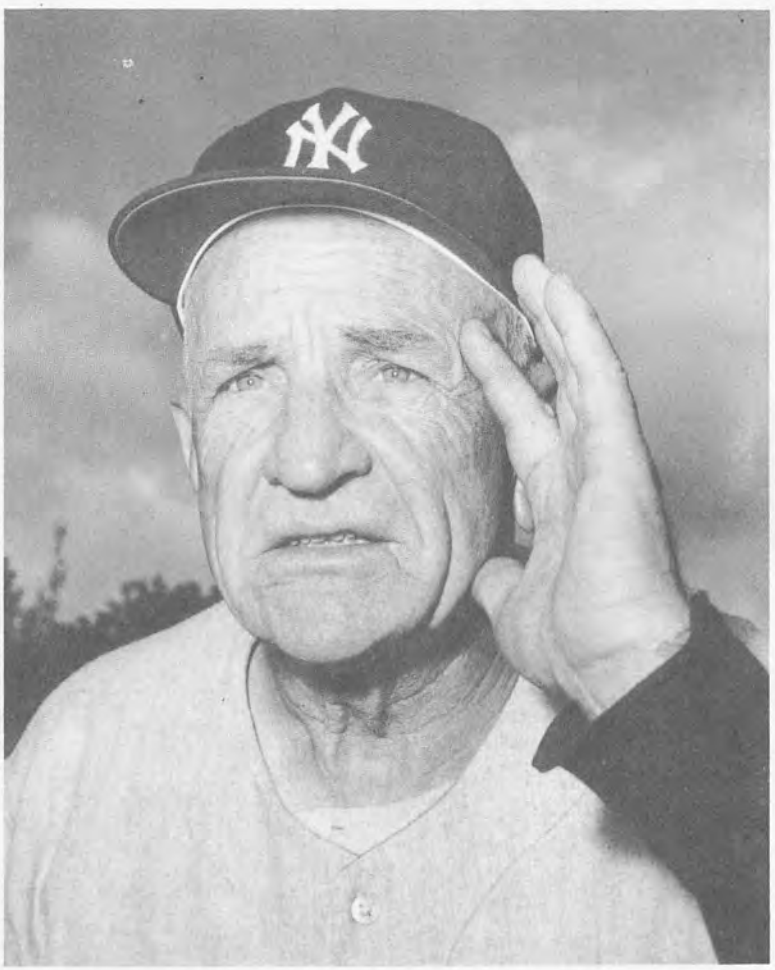
Manager Stengel



The only change in the normal routine of the Yankee dugout last summer was the absence of Bill Dickey as a coach. Casey Stengel marched on to the winning of the eighth American League pennant under his regime.

This has become a record unparalled in the annals of major league baseball. Once before a Yankee manager had won eight pennants, when it was accomplished under the aegis of Joe McCarthy. But what is absolutely unrivalled by any previous mentor is the fact that Stengel has done this task in just nine campaigns. The only time the season's end hasn't found Casey wearing the roses in the winner's circle was in 1954, when the Yankees came in second. And, the more remarkable about that year is the fact that in losing, the club won more games (103) than in any year Stengel has managed them. It was just that Cleveland, to win, set a league record.

Another interesting side-light on the Stengel stewardship has been the rapidity of introducing new, young players to big league playing. At the time the Yankees reported to 1958 Spring Training, they had only one ten-year veteran who had made his career with the club, Larry Berra. The two deans, Slaughter and Maglie, of, course, had played most of their careers in the National League. During that eight-year span, Casey had called up from Rookie School such players as Bob Grim, John Kucks, Tony Kubek, Norm Siebern and others. He has outstanding success in molding these men to star classification.

While building this great achievement of championship clubs, Stengel has concentrated on maintaining an all-Yankee coaching staff. When Hall-of-Famer Bill Dickey was sidelined last summer, his replacement was Charlie Keller, to finish out the year. Going into 1958, with Dickey retired, Ralph Houk has taken up to post.

Combined with Houk are the two returning coaches, Jim Turner and Frank Crosetti. These two have been together on the coaching staff since before the Stengel regime. Houk, until recently an active catcher with the Yankees, but standing behind Yogi Berra, was sent out to manage in Denver to acquire experience. This follows a pattern, reaching back into the farm system to supply the minor league players with instructors, who by their playing experience, have already learned the Yankee way.

To the Sidelines

• Just about a year ago baseball fans everywhere were saddened to learn that the Yankee's All-Time great, Bill Dickey, had been taken off the coaching lines by illness. All season long it was hoped that his inactive time would be temporary.

At Spring Training, 1958, Bill reported, but soon announced his retirement from active coaching. He returned to his home in Oklahoma, where he will act as a scout for the parent club in the future.

No baseball fan, regardless of affiliation, can ever forget some of the feats of this Hall of Famer. Player on the super-clubs that included Ruth and Gehrig, Dickey was at least a match in ability with these heros. In fact, his 1936 batting average of .363 makes him the only Yankee to hold a position on the American League all-time batting team.

Dickey is one of the few men in a long baseball career to have spent his entire time within one organization. Both as a player, coach, and part of one season as a manager, Bill was always a Yankee. Now as a scout, he will continue in the making of potential champions.

MAN AT WORK. Two photos of Bill Dickey show him throwing off mask to go after high pop foul and taking his cut at the plate.

WORLD SERIES . . . 1957

• For the third time in a row, the Yankees tangled up in a seven-game World Series. In the long history of these post-season spectacles, this is only the third time that it has required the full seven games each of three years consecutively. In years past, it has been a trademark of the Yankees, except when playing their former intra-city rivals from Brooklyn, that they vanquished the National League rivals speedily.

The real closeness of last October's games is shown by the final figures, where it is disclosed that there were only two runs difference in the totals scored by the two teams in seven games, and the Yanks actually out-scored the Braves, 25-23. As all stories concerning this encounter must end, one man seemed to be the leveller, Lew Burdette.

On these pages are some of the highlights of the games, and scores of each of them.

BEFORE A BALL WAS THROWN . . . rival managers, Casey Stengel and Fred Haney met at Yankee Stadium on the afternoon before the Series.

SOMETHING ON THE BALL . . . Yankee pitching star Whitey Ford is shown bearing down to seal first game win for Yankees, 3-1.

From So Few, So Much

The popular term, reminiscent of football's specialist system, "two-platooning", is an understatement on the 1958 Yankees. A look at the accompanying diagram gives you some idea of how twenty-five Yankees can be made to look like an entire Army. Except for pitchers, and some of them go in as pinch-hitters, hardly a man can be classified as holding down one position. It gets to the point that a fellow hardly knows what glove to take out to the park, doesn't it?

MICKEY MANTLE

BORN: Oct. 20, 1931 at Spavinaw, Oklahoma. WINTER ADDRESS: Commerce, Okla. HEIGHT: 5' 11". WEIGHT: 196. Switch hitter, throws right. Married, three children. Blonde hair, gray eyes.

• Every superlative in the baseball vocabulary has to be pulled out to describe the continued assault Mantle is making on the record book. While 1957 was not the equal in honors to his "triple-header" of 1956, he still stood out over the whole league. While losing his batting championship to Ted Williams, Mickey improved on his previous year's .353 to come up to .365. Only the fact that the Red Sox star came up with his greatest year since 1941 interfered with his holding the crown.

While losing the RBI and homer laurels to Washington's Roy Sievers, the top award of the league still went to Mantle. In a close vote by the Baseball Writers, Mickey was named, for the second year in a row, as the American League's Most Valuable Player.

During 1957, Mantle may have dropped in home-run production, but the fact that he was given 146 bases on balls, topping both leagues, had something to do with that. And, what may be as important to the Yankees, Mickey cut down his strikeouts, from 99 in 1956 to 75 last season. The number of times he got on base is shown by the fact that he led both leagues in runs scored, 121. This marked the third time in four years that the Yankee centerfielder had led the American League in this department.

A general idea of the worth of this outstanding player to the Yankees is noted in the contract figures. It was reported that Mantle was signed for a figure of $75,000 for 1958. Not bad for a 26 year-old fellow.

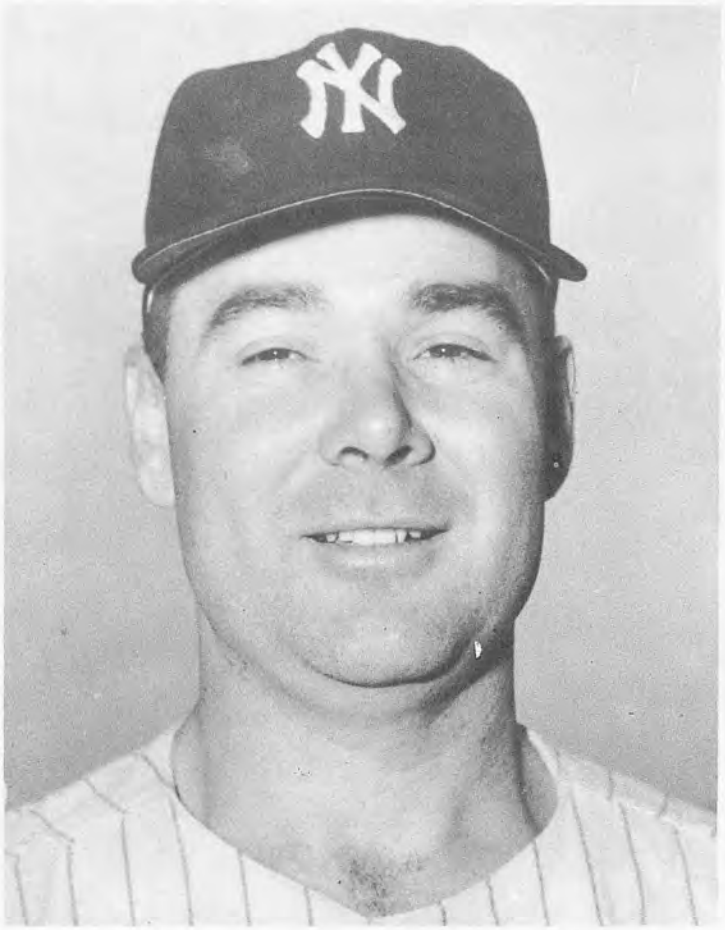
TOM STURDIVANT

BORN: April 28, 1930 at Gordon, Kansas. WINTER ADDRESS: Oklahoma City, Okla. HEIGHT: 6′ 1″. WEIGHT 180. BATS left, throws right. Married, two children. Brown hair, brown eyes.



• For a fellow once considered to be just a run-of-the-mine infielder, Tom Sturdivant has come a long way. He actually put in three seasons in minor leagues around second and third base before attempting to make the big club as a pitcher. Now, after only three years with the Yanks as a pitcher, he emerged last summer as the leading hurler on the staff. He established his claim to this leadership by reason of pitching the most innings of any Yankee, by posting the most wins (16-6), and by having the league leading won-lost percentage (.727). Actually, this percentage tied him with team-mate Art Ditmar, but Ditmar had not pitched a sufficient number of innings to be considered in league-leading figures. During his three-year tenure on the Yankee staff, Tom has well established himself as a nemisis for two clubs, having a 7-1 record over the Orioles and 8-3 with the Indians.

BOB TURLEY

BORN: Sept. 19, 1930 at Troy, Illinois. WINTER ADDRESS: Lutherville, Md. HEIGHT: 6' 2". WEIGHT: 215. BATS and throws right. Married, two children. Brown hair, blue eyes.

• The averages from 1957 would indicate that the big right-hander, Bob Turley had come of age as a major league pitcher last summer. He clearly had his best season since getting out of the minor leagues. Apparently helped by the no windup pitching style espoused by Don Larsen first and copies by others, Bob reduced "those bases on balls" that had harassed him for so many seasons. And, while he was making this important reduction in statistics, he added almost 60 strike-outs to his total of the previous summer. While this strike-out total still didn't equal some of those years when he was leading the league or competing with Cleveland's Herb Score for that title, it was mighty impressive. And, to top off his improved performance in the record book, there was the fact that his earned run average, at 2.71, was less than half of the figure from 1956.

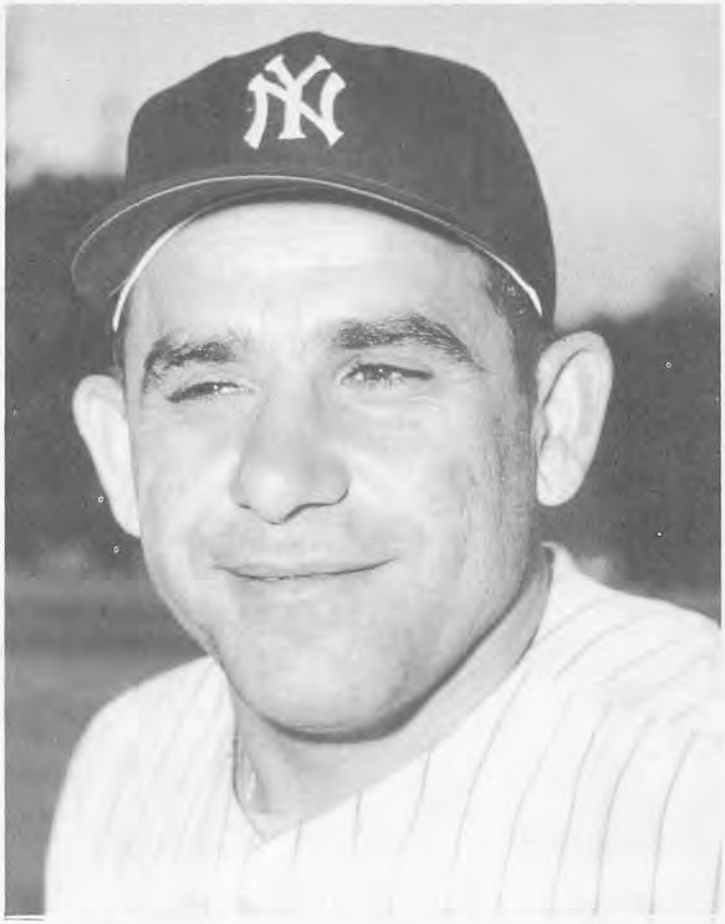
LARRY BERRA

BORN: May 12, 1925 at St. Louis, Mo. WINTER ADDRESS: Tenafly, N. J. HEIGHT: 5' 8". WEIGHT: 192. BATS left, throws right. Married, three children. Black hair, brown eyes.



• The spark-plug, fire-plug of the Yankees won't look back on 1957 as the year he most enjoyed in his major league career. Statistically speaking, the veteran catcher fell off in just about every department, offensively. That .251 batting average was his lowest in organized ball, back to 1943. A prolonged batting slump at the beginning of the season held him down around .200 for weeks. As a test, Larry tried wearing glasses, but found no great help from them.

The miseries that Berra had at the plate did not serve to lessen his defensive performance, however. For the first time during his Yankee tenure, Larry led all American League catchers in fielding average. In this department, he was joined by Yank pitcher Bobby Shantz, a perennial outstanding defensive pitcher.

By appearing in all seven of the 1957 World Series games, Berra collected several lines in the record book. He has now been in 54 post-season contests, surpassing former teammate Phil Rizzuto's 52 mark; those 8 hits that Yogi got last Fall brought his Series total to 55, breaking Joe Dimaggio's record of 54.

The trouble with being so far outstanding in a position as Berra has been over the years is the comparisons that are made, year against year. It can be pointed out that 1957 was a bad one for Yogi, but that overlooks an important item. In both RBI and home-runs, 1957 totals of 82 and 24 still led all major league catchers. So it wouldn't be good policy to write off the value of this man, not for quite a while yet.

GIL McDOUGALD

BORN: May 19, 1928 at San Francisco, Calif. WINTER ADDRESS: Tenafly, N. J. HEIGHT: 6' 1". WEIGHT: 177. BATS and throws right. Married, four children. Brown hair, blue eyes.

• Year after year, one of the least heralded of the outstanding men of recent Yankee clubs has been Gil McDougald. In the Stengel system of two-platooning, it is hard to figure whether Gil is the best second baseman, the league's outstanding shortstop, or the top candidate on the club at third. He has played all of these positions with equal success during recent campaigns. McDougald was one of the early successes in the Stengel program of rapid advancement for outstanding farm system players. In 1951 Gil was on a minor league roster when he was called to the rookie school. He not only ended up on the parent club that year, but was named American League Rookie of the Year. Last season was a personal high in several batting departments for Gil since coming into the majors. He scored the most runs he has as a Yankee, got the most hits, and led the league in triples. For the third year in a row he tallied thirteen homers.

BORN: Oct. 12, 1935 at Milwaukee, Wisc. WINTER ADDRESS: Milwaukee, Wisc. HEIGHT: 6' 3". WEIGHT: 188. BATS left, throws right. Single.

In the Rookie of the Year contest last season, there could only be one outstanding choice. But it is a good thing they don't pick a rookie "Team of the Year." Can you imagine which of his four 1957 playing positions Kubek would not have had to be awarded? During the season, and into the World Series, this great product of Milwaukee played second, short, third and the outfield. That reference to Milwaukee isn't accidental, either. When Tony played his first game of the 1957 World Series before his home-folks in the Wisconsin city, he cracked out two home runs in the big 12-3 Yankee win. That took not only strength, but courage among the rabid partisans of the Braves. After just three minor league seasons, Kubek was picked out of the rookie school last year and added to the Yankee club. He punished American League pitching for a .297 first-year average, his only year of below .330 performance since joining organized baseball.

BORN: Sept. 26, 1925 at Pottstown, Pa. WINTER ADDRESS: Ambler, Pa. HEIGHT: 5' 6¼". WEIGHT: 150. BATS right, throws left. Married, three children. Blonde hair, blue eyes.

Unquestionably one of the top stories of the 1957 season, and one of the most heart-warming, was the return to star-status of Bobby Shantz. Plagued by a succession of unstellar years after his heroic performances in 1952, Bobby came to in Yanks last year as what many termed a throw-in on the deal to acquire Art Ditmar. All he proceeded to do was to become the mainstay of the Bronx hurlers, particularly for the first half of the season, when Mgr. Stengel was in a more precarious state for good pitching. At the season's end, with a fine 11-5 record, the "Little Man" had come through as the American League's ERA champion, with a 2.45 average. He had sufficiently impressed the league by June that he was named to the All-Star team, the first time he had been selected since 1952. More than most Yankee pitchers, he completed what he started, as he and Bob Turley, both of whom pitched nine complete games, led the staff in this respect. It was most proper that during the winter Bobby was selected for having made the "Comeback of the Year."

WHITEY FORD

BORN: Oct. 21, 1928 at New York, N. Y. WINTER ADDRESS: Glen Cove, N. Y. HEIGHT: 5' 10". WEIGHT: 180. BATS and throws left. Married, three children. Blond hair, blue eyes.

• Leading pitcher among all active major leaguers in won-lost percentage, lifetime, 1957 was pretty rough on Whitey Ford. The native New Yorker who had become the "dean" of the Yank's staff in point of service while still only twenty-nine years old, had a bad case of arm trouble for much of the campaign and ended up with only eleven wins. This was his lowest total in a full season as a member of the club, and the small number of innings pitched, 129, was also a personal low. But, just in case the American League opponents were getting to hopeful about not having to face Whitey as often in 1958, his arm miseries disappeared in time for the 1957 World Series. During that seven-game conflict, he pitched the greatest number of innings of any member of the Yankee staff. One of his records was broken in 1957, however, when he did not appear in the All-Star Game, the first time in four years that he failed to do so.

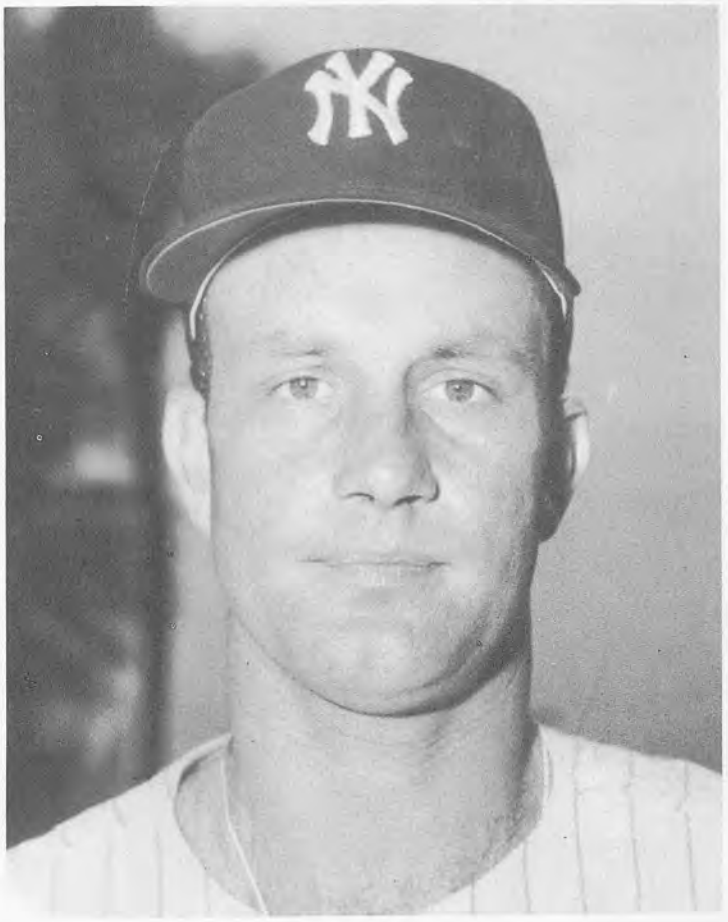
BOB GRIM

BORN: March 8, 1930 at New York, N. Y. WINTER ADDRESS: Brooklyn, N. Y. HEIGHT: 6' 1". WEIGHT: 185. BATS and throws right. Single. Black hair, hazel eyes.



• If 1957 is a fair indication, Bob Grim is the heir apparent to the "Fireman" crowns once worn by Joe Page and Johnny Murphy. Over the last campaign he appeared in forty-six ball games, a tie with Art Ditmar. Along with his twelve wins, Grim was credited with twenty "saves". That he doesn't stay around long to achieve this record is substantiated by the fact that those 46 games saw him pitch only seventy-two innings all season long. On the Yankee staff his is second only to Whitey Ford in lifetime winning percentage. The oddest part of this figure may be the fact that both of these outstanding hurlers are native-born New Yorkers toiling in their home-town, a baseball rarity anymore. Grim is one of those seldom found gems, a twenty-game winner in his rookie major league season. That achievement was sufficient to earn his recognition as the American League "Rookie of the Year" in 1954. A peculiarlty of his career so far has been the fact that he has yet to win his first World Series game, though appearing in five of these contests. Of those five he was charged with losses in two.

JOHNNY KUCKS

BORN: July 27, 1933 at Hoboken, N. J. WINTER ADDRESS: Hillsdale, N. J. HEIGHT: 6' 3". WEIGHT: 185. BATS and throws right. Married. Blonde hair, blue eyes.

1957 was a very peculiar year for Johnny Kucks. After a brilliant season during 1956, when he was second only to Whitey Ford on the Yankee hill crew, with eighteen wins, Kucks, last season dropped to a low total of only eight victories against ten losses. But, while losing more than he won, he improved his performance in almost every other respect, giving fewer bases on balls, fewer hits, fewer runs, and had more strike-outs. It would hardly seem that improvment pays in the face of those figures. However, there should be many good years ahead for young John, who is still only 24 years old. After only one season in the minor leagues, and then two full seasons out for military service, he was called to the Yanks' rookie school in St. Petersburg in 1955 and made the varsity that first season.

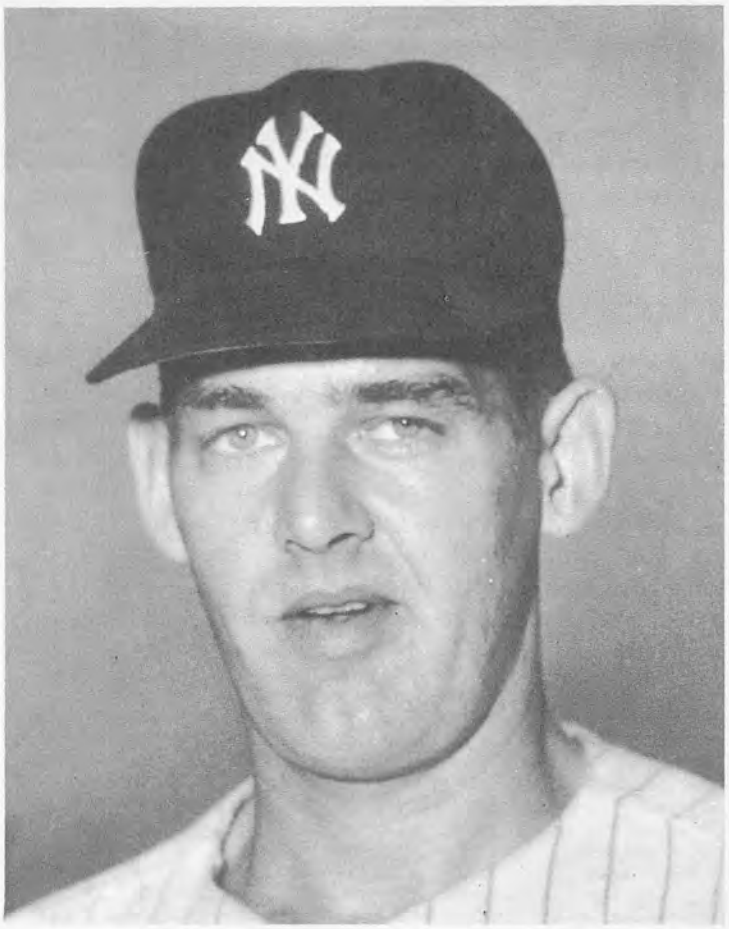
DON LARSEN

BORN: August 7, 1929 at Michigan City, Ind. WINTER ADDRESS: San Diego, Calif. HEIGHT: 6' 4". WEIGHT: 220. BATS and throws right. Married. Brown hair, blue eyes.



Hero of the 1956 World Series, Larsen found that last summer was the "year after". The burden of living up to the pinnacle of having thrown the only Perfect Game ever in World Series play may have been too heavy. In any event, last season Don worked in only 140 innings and posted a 10-4 won lost record. Promise of better things to come was evidenced in Florida this Spring during the early exhibition games, when big, strong Don was the most effective of the Yankee hurlers. This leading exponent of the no-windup pitching motion changed another personal status over the winter when he was married during the off-season.

HANK BAUER

BORN: July 31, 1922 at East St. Louis, Ill. WINTER ADDRESS: Overland Park, Kan. HEIGHT: 6′ 0″. WEIGHT: 189. BATS and throws right. Married, three children.

• In just about nobody's book does the rugged ex-Marine appear as the typical lead-off man. There just doesn't seem to be much resemblance to the Eddie Stanky type physique that one associates with the top lineup spot. But lead-off man for the Yankees he is. And even in this usually unproductive position for bringing team-mates around, Hank was fourth man on the whole club last year in runs batted in. His heavy bat also made him third on the team in number of home runs over the season, too. As usual, and as fans have come to expect, Bauer saved a few blasts for the World Series. His home run in the sixth game broke a 2-2 tie and made the Yankees a winner for the day. For the seven-game Series he led the Yankees in total bases and in runs batted in.

BILL SKOWRON

BORN: Dec. 18, 1930 at Chicago, Ill. WINTER ADDRESS: Hillsdale, N. J. HEIGHT: 6' 0". WEIGHT: 195. BATS and throws right. Married, two children. Black hair, blue eyes.

• Big Bill Skowron may have found himself a home at first base last season. For the first season since he joined the Yanks, he did all of his playing at one position during 1957. He rewarded the club by doing a fine job on the bag, while displaying the potent bat that everyone credits him for. Had he not been hampered during the latter part of the season by reason of an accident that occured at his home, he would undoubtedly have had his best over-all year as a Yankee. Unfortunately for the Yankees, this injury had not healed sufficiently to permit him to serve full-duty during the World Series, when he got into only two games. During regular season play last summer the "Moose" twice hit two homers in a single game, and on one occasion hit a grandslam homer as a pinch-hitter. No doubt some of the respect for the power potential in this big man comes from a knowledge of his record as a fullback and punter in Big Ten collegiate football while he was in college at Purdue.

ENOS SLAUGHTER

BORN: April 27, 1916 at Roxboro, N. C. WINTER ADDRESS: Roxboro, N. C. HEIGHT: 5′ 9½″. WEIGHT: 191. BATS left, throws right. Married, two children.

• Once again, as the scribes open up their record books to account for a new season in the big leagues, they are figuring out how to save space for the lines to go with Enos Slaughter. During Spring Training there were the usual stories about how "Old Eno" was about to be retired. But every one knows that he's probably going to have to be chased out of that uniform and that it is going to take a fast man to do it. Counting three summers that he spent in military service, the ex-Cardinal has completed twenty years of major league time, and has become the senior player among all major leaguers still active. Along with that longevity as a member of the big leagues, he has been accumulating some pretty fair statistics on his performance, too. At this point his principle rival in the American League is Boston's Ted Williams, the only player active in the league to lead Slaughter in number of runs scored and runs batted in, lifetime. Because of his still great speed and daring running, he leads the league in the number of three-base hits in a career among all present players.

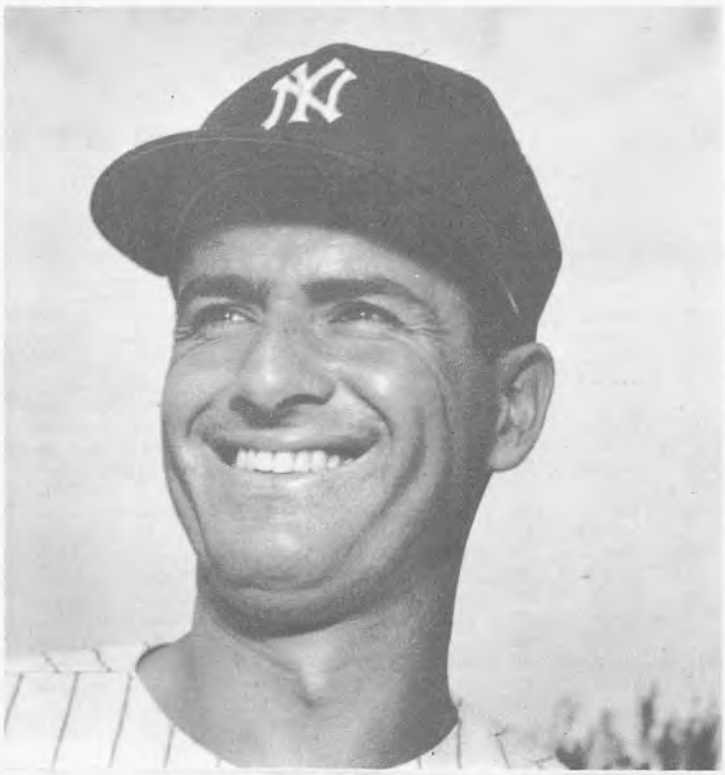
From the Front Lines to the Front Office

• Shortly after the close of the 1957 season, it was announced that one of the most popular of recent Yankee players had been elevated to a front office desk. All American League fans will miss the outstanding play of Jerry Coleman, but will wish him continued success as a top brass member of the Yankee family.

Twice in his playing career Jerry had interruptions to fly tours of duty with the Marine Air Arm. Apparently the training with the Marines served to good advantage with Jerry, since he was consistently at his best under pressure as a player. After winning the "Rookie of the Year Award" for the American League in 1949, he was named outstanding player of the World Series in 1950 (Babe Ruth Award). After his return from the Korean Incident, he didn't play in many games per year, especially after being sidelined twice with major injuries in 1954.

Last season Jerry bowed out in typical fashion, by leading the Yankees at bat in the World Series, with a .364 average, and having tied three others on the club for the greatest number of hits in the Series.

In his new position, as an assistant in the player personnel office, all Yankee partisans hope that Jerry will have the same inspirational qualities he always had on the field.



HIGH-FLYER COLEMAN. Either pivoting on double-play or flying for U. S. Marines, Coleman gets his man.

FIRST BLOOD. Jerry Coleman scored first run of 1957 World Series in 5th inning, as Yanks won 3-1.
